

Buddhist leader receives Honorary Fellowship from Oxford University

TNN REPORT

JAMMU: His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The Centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars.

"I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said Drukpa, adding, "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Indian Buddhist Leader receives Honorary Fellowship from Oxford's Wolfson College

VOI NEWS SERVICE

JAMMU: His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas. His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars. In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations. "I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa.

Indian Buddhist Leader receives Fellowship from Oxford

HIMALAYAN MAIL NEWS
JAMMU, JUNE 24

His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars. In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations. "I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa. "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Indian Buddhist Leader receives Honorary Fellowship

MT NEWS SERVICE
Jammu, June 24:

His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars. In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations.

Indian Buddhist Leader receives Honorary Fellowship from Oxford's Wolfson College

JAMMU JUNE 24 His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars.

In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations.

"I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa.

"It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Indian Buddhist Leader receives Honorary Fellowship from Oxford's Wolfson College

JAMMU: His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas. His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars. In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations. "I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa.

Indian Buddhist leader receives Honorary Fellowship

NEWSPOINT BUREAU

Jammu Tawi, June 24

HIS Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, received the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012.

The centre is a unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars.

In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations.

"I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa. "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Buddhist leader receives honorary Fellowship from Oxford's College

KT NEWS SERVICE

JAMMU, June 24: His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious honorary fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is a unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars.

In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations.

"I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa. "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Buddhist leader bestowed with Honorary Fellowship by Oxford

Jammu:

His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism, accepts the prestigious Honorary Fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas. His Holiness first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship' in honour of His Holiness and the award further recognises his importance in helping educate and protect Himalayan cultural history preserving it for future generations.

"I am honored to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honorary Fellows," said His Holiness the Gyalwang Drukpa. "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history."

Oxford's Wolfson College confers honorary fellowship to Gyalwang Drukpa

STATE TIMES NEWS

JAMMU: Oxford's Wolfson College conferred prestigious honorary fellowship to Spiritual head of the Drukpa Order of Buddhism Gyalwang Drukpa in recognition to his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

The world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate Gyalwang first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is a unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and for providing the best possible training to young generation of scholars.

Gyalwang Drukpa receiving citation from the representative of Wolfson College.

In 2015 Wolfson College created 'The Gyalwang Drukpa Scholarship'.

"I am honoured to join the impressive list of Wolfson Honourary Fellows," said Gyalwang Drukpa. "It has been a privilege to work with the college over the past five years as it has led the way in promoting all the diverse cultures of the Himalayas and its history," Gyalwang Drukpa added.

Gyalwang receives Oxford University Fellowship

Excelsior Correspondent

LEH, June 24: Gyalwang Drukpa, the world-renowned humanitarian, environmentalist and women's rights advocate, and spiritual head of the

-Excelsior/ Morup Stanzin

Drukpa Order of Buddhism, today accepted a prestigious honorary fellowship from Wolfson College of Oxford, in recognition of his tireless commitment to cultural preservation in the Himalayas.

Gyalwang first visited the Tibetan and Himalayan Studies Centre at Wolfson in 2012. The centre is an unique Himalayan studies environment within the UK and one of the leading ones in the world, creating opportunities for interdisciplinary research and a new platform for presenting Himalayan culture to a wider audience. It is dedicated to preserving and promoting Himalayan cultural heritage, to maintaining links between Oxford and Tibetan and Himalayan Buddhist communities in Asia and to providing the best possible training for a young generation of scholars.